     with their own system through local rules for assigning 4 adds some additional confusion, and that is, "A witness

9 has everybody got one? There's some extra copies. I 10 decided to -- I had given this problem once Buddy -- I 11 had really hoped Buddy would sponsor this for me so that designated as an expert in the case. It begins by, "Q have you read the contents of Deposition Exhibit 5?

                  I thought Tex did a good job, and rather 18 than take credit for the work, I just included his memo.
19 Basically the problem that I've -- that has bothered me 20 with 199.5(f) is the addition of the ability to protect 20 not going to answer that."
21 a witness with the phrase — or to instruct the witness 22 not to answer with the phrase "protect the witness from 25 it's not my intention to do away with protecting a 25 doctor not to answer the question.

1 witness from an abusive question. My problem is with 2 the last sentence there, "or one for which an answer would be misleading

What Tex has done here is outline the 5 history of the rule as it went through the subcommittee 6 as we could find it, and the original proposal, the original draft of the subcommittee, on page 26 of a memorandum sent to this committee as it was previously 9 constituted by Justice Hecht in January of '98, if 10 you'll turn to page 26, it's in section A, the rule 11 reads, "Instructions to the deponent not to answer a 12 question are improper except to preserve a privilege 13 against disclosure, to enforce a limitation on evidence 14 directed by the court, or to protect a witness from an 15 abusive question, or to secure a ruling pursuant to 16 paragraph 6. Upon request of the instructing" -- "upon 17 request the instructing party shall explain the grounds 18 for the instruction clearly, concisely, and in a non-argumentative manner and non-suggesting manner.
 "Should a court later order the deponent 21 to answer the question to which the deponent was 22 instructed not to answer, the court may impose an appropriate sanction for discovery abuse under 215."

Now, there is a later draft which follows 25 that that was sent out in June which discusses -- which

"Q. Do you think it reflects the 18 accurate standard of care for emergency physicians?" 19 The lawyer objects and says, "No, you're The witness, "I'm not able to answer it." Lawyer, "I object to form, the question -- to the form of that question because any 24 answer the doctor gives is misleading and instruct the Page 953 Now, he goes on, and the lawyer is never 2 able to get an answer as to what standard the doctor should have been following or what is the appropriate 4 standard for an emergency room doctor from not only the 5 defendant, but a defendant who has been named as an expert in the case. If you turn to the next page, the same lawyer in the same case is instructing the witness not to answer the following questions.

"Q. So you just get these bonuses, and you have no idea how you got them," talking about bonuses he gets, I assume, from an HMO. "I don't 10 11 understand."

"A. You don't need to answer that question, instruct him not to."

15 "Q. Do you get bonuses based on 16 something other than just providing hourly services to 17 the emergency room doctor" -- I mean, "to the emergency Again he gets an instruction not to answer. You go on to the next page, and the question is asked, "Do you understand or did you know that Presbyterian Hospital at Greenville had some sort 22 of hospital emergency discount policy for employees?" 23 Again he gets the instruction not to answer. On page 36 of that deposition, "Q. Why did you choose a family practice residency?" Going on down to line 11, "Does a family practice doctor usually 1 in Arlington and talked to him about his statute and Again, you get an objection not to answer, instruct the 3 attempting to do, and we had about an hour, hour and a 4 half meeting, I would guess with Senator Harris. It was 5 very productive. He was very supportive of what we were 6 doing, and I think, if I'm not misquoting him, said that 7 if we got the recusal rule worked around to where it witness not to answer, that the question is vague and any answer would be misleading.

Now, if you'll look through there, that deposition is full of the problems that I anticipate, 8 and they're not ordinarily going to happen to Buddy Low 9 or Bill Dorsaneo or myself. They're going to happen covered some of the concerns he had, which we discussed 9 at our last meeting, he would be happy to roll his 10 statute into our rule and basically have the statute 10 with experienced lawyers who the rule was originally passed to keep from giving the type objections in 11 repealed, so that there's just one place you can look

                CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Okay. Well, you-all 3 can take this back to the subcommittee. Our next 3 is the revised language for Rule 18a that we're going to meeting is going to be in May, and if you-all can get together on this between now and then we'll put it on talk about this morning. Thank you, Elaine.

Probably the best thing for us to do is 6 to go through Judge Hester's proposal and tell you what the agenda for then, and if not, we'll bump it over to the meeting after that.
                                                                                      our thoughts were on that, and then we have a proposal from the presiding judge up in Dallas, Judge McDowell, which we'll comment on that, and then we'll go into our

                                                                                  The first thing I'd like to take up is Judge Hester's letter of February 23 of 2000, and you'll see attached to the back of that letter is this revised 19 Bob, this afternoon?
               MR. PEMBERTON: 2:00 o'clock.
               CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: 2:00 o'clock. So 22 we'll break in our deliberations to hear from 23 Representative Dutton on that. With respect to the 24 recusal rule, since our last meeting Bob Pemberton and 25 Richard and I went and had a meeting with Senator Harris Rule 18a that has Luke Soules' business card attached to 23 it, and basically Judge Hester is complaining about a 24 potential abuse of the Rule 18a recusal process that was 25 referred to in Justice Hecht's dissent in the PG&E

   Energy case, and this attached rule is a proposed fix.
   Our subcommittee looked at this and said, well, we see 3 that it could be subject to abuse in the right circumstances or the wrong circumstances, but we didn't feel like the proposed language would be the fix, and the problem is this, as I understand it -- and, Justice 7 Hecht, correct me because I think you analyzed this in Once the recusal has occurred the 10 presiding judge is supposed to appoint a replacement judge to try the case. In this particular case that is 12 in question here, the PG&E Energy case, a recusal 13 occurred, the presiding judge appointed a replacement 14 judge to hear the case, but the local presiding 15 administrative judge eventually removed that new 16 appointed judge from the case and assigned it to himself. So basically the recusal process worked well,

2 written into the rule. The second proposal that Judge McDowell 4 made is that the sanctions rules for recusals are not 5 very well tailored to the recusal process. To a certain degree they just invoke discovery sanctions, some of which are not appropriate, and he also complains that the standard for sanctions is the motion is made without just cause and solely for the purpose of delay, and the words "solely for the purpose of delay" I believe Judge McDowell felt like was a more difficult proposition because there might be reasons besides delay, even if delay was the major reason, and if you took the word "solely" out of there, that would give the judge more 15 freedom to impose sanctions, and further he wanted to 16 beef up the court's contempt power in recusal process, 17 and this is not the attacked judge but the judge 18 appointed to hear the recusal would be given the power 19 for contempt. And we have written the rule -- our 20 21 assessment of it was that we did not want to liberalize that too greatly, and when we get into this discussion

1 it over or private attorneys at county expense should be 21 believe that this proposal here was attempted to -- is 22 an attempt to be sure that no local administrative 23 authority to re-assign cases can override the 24 appointment of the presiding judge of a replacement 25 judge for a judge who has been recused. I hope that was Page 961

18 but the replacement process, if you will, was overridden

19 by operation of local rules about re-assigning the case

20 after recusal to another local district judge, and I

23 we can go into the reasons why and wherefore, but 24 basically I think it's our view that the sanctions rule 25 does need to be revised somewhat but not as radically as

1 clear. Is that correct? JUSTICE HECHT: Yeah. I think in a 3 nutshell the question is either before or after a motion 4 to recuse is ruled on can the local judges transfer the case in such a way as to moot the motion?

MR. ORSINGER: Okay. Well, I hope that our language solves that problem. We'll look at it. Now, at the subcommittee level there was a concern. 10 Travis County, where we have, if you will, random 11 assignment every time the case comes up; and if this 12 particular problem is a problem in one area of the 13 state, you don't want necessarily to write a rule that 14 wrecks legitimate practice in other areas. So we tried

There are some counties, particularly Bexar County and 15 to do something that would address this problem but not 16 too much encroach on other practices, and let's look at that when we get to the rule.

Carl Hamilton has rewritten this rule for 19 us, and we're going to go through it sequentially, and 20 I'm not going to take up that language right now. I 21 just want to put this idea before you, and we'll get to 22 it in a minute. We've attempted to address that 23 problem, but it may require even a little more 24 flexibility than what we've written into it, and we'll 25 get to it in discussion.

Page 964 Judge McDowell has suggested. Now, Chip, our proposed rule doesn't 3 address in any way this issue of the appointment of the judge to represent -- or appointment of a lawyer to represent the judge, and so probably we ought to take 6 that up before we get into the rule because it's just simply not in our rule. As I said, the subcommittee just is not forwarding a recommendation that this step be taken, and so basically it's laid before the 10 committee for a discussion. CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Well, why don't we --12 rather than try to take up time while we're fresh on 13 something that you don't have any language on and which I could see --15 MR. ORSINGER: We'll defer it until later 16 then. 17 CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yeah. Do that when 18 we're all tired and want to blow it off.

20 CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Note the laughter. No 21 disrespect to Judge McDowell. We'll take that issue seriously. 22 MR. ORSINGER: Yes. Well, Judge Peeples 23 24 had forwarded a list of suggestions that the presiding 25 judge had worked up, and I believe that we either

MR. ORSINGER: Judge Peeples had -

1 Then in your materials behind Tab 3 is a 2 letter from Judge Pat McDowell, who is the presiding 3 administrative judge in Dallas and a lot of North 4 Central Texas, and his letter of October 21, '99, has 5 two proposals relating to recusal. The first proposal 6 is that the judge who's being attacked in the recusal 7 practice should have a lawyer representing his or her interest other than the opposing party in the underlying lawsuit, and he proposes that the local district 10 attorney or county attorney would be appointed to defend 11 the judge in the recusal, except in criminal cases where 12 obviously they're representing the state in the prosecution or in front of judges where the D.A. appears in prosecutions. Now, that's going to be a problem in some 16 counties because some counties have both criminal and 17 civil jurisdiction in front of the civil judges. At our 18 subcommittee level there was just no support for the 19 idea of having government attorneys defend the judge, 20 and as an alternative Judge McDowell suggested that 21 private attorneys be appointed and paid by the county, 22 and there likewise seemed to be no support at the 23 subcommittee level for this proposal. We'll lay it out 24 here for discussion, but we're not recommending that 25 that step of having the D.A. or the county attorney take 9 the criticism. So, Carl, go ahead.

10 MR. HAMILTON: Well, I don't deserve the 17 time you do any slight editing you can inadvertently 17 rule.

                                                                              18 CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: That's a current rule.
19 MR. ORSINGER: And Scott likes that rule 20 because it uses the word "association" which he says has 18 make a change, and I think there are a couple of 19 important ones.
               CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: As we just found out 21 a rich history of interpretation that would permit

              MR. ORSINGER: Yeah. I think Scott's 22 lawyers in government service to take the bench and 25 the wording is a little bit different, and so we should PROFESSOR DORSANEO: But the language of probably look at each line at some point and be sure we're comfortable with the new language. They are not word for word the same, but they are very close.

                                                                                3 who came up with this language and shortened it.
    PROFESSOR DORSANEO: Why don't we talk about that now and get rid of it?
                                                                                              HONORABLE SCOTT BRISTER: I'm sure I was the one.

               MR. HAMILTON: You want to bring it up PROFESSOR DORSANEO: We could put the now?

               MR. ORSINGER: Let's do it now. Is that HONORABLE F. SCOTT McCOWN: I mean, you 9 all right with you?
10 CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Sure.
11 MR. ORSINGER: Okay. You have in your 12 materials behind Tab 3 Rule 18b, grounds for 10 don't even have to use the word "association." I've 11 suggested two fixes. One is leave it like it is, a 12 little bit cumbersome; or alternatively, at the end of 13 the new (a)(1) just add the phrase "other than while last meeting.

                                                                                 gives -- and I don't know this. I never heard of it CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Okay. Well, would you take it upon yourself, Judge, to -- before -- the lawyers the right to choose. If they have 14 a constitutional right how can the Legislature or the 15 rules take it away?
              HONORABLE SCOTT BRISTER: Sure.
              CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: To make sure we don't MR. ORSINGER: We can't, and it's in

 3 every situation, and it seems like there are lots of situations where it would be way too broad.
               CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Buddy Low.
MR. LOW: Chip, I know when David Fisher
                                                                                      5 now. I count 22 in favor.
6 All opposed? Five opposed. It carries 7 22 to 5, so we will delete that language.
8 Okay. What else about grounds for 7 in my firm was an associate we could practice in Judge 8 Fisher's court. David couldn't. When he became a 9 partner we just could no longer. I mean, I don't know

10 if that followed the Federal or what, but there was a MR. HAMILTON: Well, we've added two new 11 difference between an associate and a partner drawn in 11 paragraphs, (9) and (10).
12 that particular situation. Now, that might have been 12 CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: We're going to talk because of some Federal rule in the Eastern District or -- but they did draw a distinction.

                                                                                     MR. WATSON: Let me ask one other thing 15 before we get to those. Was there any discussion in the CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yeah. If we -- "member" may have some connotation there.
                                                                                      16 prior drafting of the situation in which one of the

               MR. LOW: Right.
               HONORABLE SCOTT BRISTER: But remember 19 the last -- whatever the last-minute case was that 19 up, but I've hit that. I just recently had a motion for

               CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Associates today get 1 trial was granted on the court's own motion.
                                                                                       It did get my attention, and yet I don't see anything here that would tell me that when I go in paid more than dirt, I might add.
               MR. LOW: But there the judge's son is working in the case and here the associate has nothing to do with the case. They hired him for that case. Here the associate doesn't. We have like a district 4 and the lawyer on the other side owes a fiduciary duty 5 to the judge that I have any basis to raise that, if 6 maybe this is a little too close indeed. To me third judge's son-in-law works for us. He can't brief or do degree of consanguinity pales by comparison to an 8 anything, and when he becomes a partner we can no longer 9 practice in that court. I mean, that's the way we've -- 8 existing attorney-client relationship between the judge 9 and the person who's on the other side.
               HONORABLE SCOTT BRISTER: Well, this says
                                                                                                     JUSTICE HECHT: This came up in a

               MR. LOW: That's what I'm saying. He was 19 for rehearing through the lawyer who represented him and 20 was also a party in the case. The recusal judge 19 not allowed to do anything in that judge's court. He was an associate. He couldn't do anything. He couldn't work on any cases in that court. He became a partner 21 reversed his position and overruled the motion to 22 and then the whole firm no longer can practice in that 23 court for some reason. I don't know if we made our own 24 rules or -- but it sounded logical to me.
                                                                                      22 recuse. A mandamus was sought.

need a DTPA case," and I just say, "No, I would not feel comfortable in your court," but that's me handling it on MR. ORSINGER: And how likely are you to
22 win?
                HONORABLE F. SCOTT MCCOWN: Well, it's 23 24 going to depend.

2 as nasty as some of them in El Paso have been. So if my end. My problem is when I walk in the courtroom and the guy on the other side I find out by hook or crook is trying to get a million dollars for the judge.
You know, where do I go? And particularly in my situation a new trial is granted on the court's own motion, appeal from that? Mandamus from that? Mandamus to recuse? Grounds for recusal? It 3 the committee is going to consider that sort of representation, you need to consider also not just who's 5 representing the judge but who's representing the 8 stinks. It looks terrible. You know, the weapon is go 9 to the press. That's the weapon that you have there.

                                                                                            MR. ORSINGER: This is a very profound 10 That's it, but to me this committee ought to do 10

              HONORABLE F. SCOTT MCCOWN: Are we going 13 subcommittee.
14 to come back to these rules at our next meeting?
                                                                                            MR. ORSINGER: Well, I mean, you know, we
             CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: It depends. It 15 can take Skip's fact scenario and say that it's troublesome; but, you know, there are judges that hunt on leases with other judges. There are judges that take a vacations with other judges. There are judges that take mean with other judges. I mean with lawyers. I 16 depends on whether we've gotten through them today HONORABLE F. SCOTT MCCOWN: The reason I
18 ask is because I wonder if this question should be recommitted to the subcommittee because it's a lot -- on 20 first flush you agree that a lawyer who has an existing 20 mean, once we start down the road that we're going to attorney-client relationship with the judge should not disqualify judges based on friendships or associations with the opposing lawyer then we have opened up a whole 22 be a lawyer in a proceeding in front of the judge. The problem is you have to write the rule to catch a lot of 23 new universe from where we've ever been before, and 24 subtleties
                                                                              24 let's plan to take a lot of time with it For example, every judge in the state has MR. LOW: And I think the rule is based
 1 cases where the AG represents him because we're on, first, the integrity of the judge. It might not be 2 constantly getting sued by pro se litigants, and the AG there every time and then these are just sort of minimal 3 comes in and represents us or the county attorney 4 represents us. You also have the problem of are you things. If you go way beyond that, I think Richard is absolutely right.
 5 talking about a then existing attorney-client CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Okay. Let's do this.
 6 relationship or are you talking about a former one?
                                                                               6 Let's take a vote on whether or not this issue is of
              For example, is the lawyer who drafts serious -- of sufficient seriousness to commit it to the your will, and he did it 15 years ago, disqualified? And then what about the law firm? And while we subcommittee. Scott.
                                                                                            HONORABLE SCOTT BRISTER: It seems to me 10 certainly need to write a rule that's fair to the 10 these -- you know, these rules are in every case you're 11 parties there are also some concerns about judges being 11 disqualified, period, if this exists. If it's one that 12 able to get representation in a community, and I'm not 12 it's sometimes yes, sometimes no, then it ought to come 13 opposed to having a rule about it and can see some good 13 under the appearance of impropriety. It seems like, you 14 know, this one seems to me close, but you know, I can 14 sense to a rule, but I don't think we can sit right here 15 in this big group and draft a rule that's actually going 16 to catch all of the subtleties.
                                                                              15 imagine a case where, you know, the attorney is suing to change the way judges are elected or something, so in effect, this guy or gal is my attorney, but you know, MR. WATSON: That's why I started by
18 saying has it been considered? I assumed it had and has 18 it's so far removed.
19 been rejected.
                                                                               19 HONORABLE F. SCOTT McCOWN: You're a PROFESSOR DORSANEO: I don't think you 20 member of a class action.
21 can assume that. There are a lot of things that could HONORABLE SCOTT BRISTER: Right. I mean,
22 be added. Judges have a lot of relationships with a lot 22 there are circumstances where I would hate to -- it 23 of different people, and you know, this one may be 24 currently of real, you know, significance at a higher 25 level than, you know, just good friends or lifelong 23 seems to me this falls more in the category of it ought 24 to be case by case rather than it's always a recusal 25 ground.

 1 friends which might be a serious problem, too, but I CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Okay.
 2 think the thing to do is to send it back to the MR. HAMILTON: It's covered under ground committee. These rules are never finished. As Judge perhaps.
    Pope used to say, you know, rule-making is a continuous CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yeah. It would be under ground (1), impartiality. Yeah, Steve. process.
                                                                                            MR. YELENOSKY: Well, in order for that MR. WATSON: I didn't mean to throw it to work I imagine there should be something done with regard to disclosure, though. You may not have known off track
              CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Which is a good thing for people who publish books about them. that the attorney on the other side was representing the PROFESSOR DORSANEO: Actually, that turns judge, and even if we don't want an automatic rule that 11 says that's grounds for recusal and we want to put it 11 out not to be true.
12 CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Okay. Buddy Low.
13 MR. LOW: I was going to say, there are a 14 lot of other things you can get -- I'd rather have a 15 lawyer representing the judge be on the other side than 12 under the generic rule, you'd have to have presumably some rule that requires disclosure of that information.
                                                                                             CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Okay. Everybody who wants to submit this issue to the subcommittee raise
    be involved in some lawyers that I know who travel with 20 submit the issue of recusing the judge when he's HON. ANN CRAWFORD MCCLURE: If you put 21 represented by a lawyer who is representing a party in 22 that in, you need to recognize also that when judges get 23 divorced somebody is representing their spouse, and so the case raise their hand.

21 under any duty to divulge that, and should he or she be?
                                                                                                 HONORABLE F. SCOTT McCOWN: You don't
22 It seems to me that it would be reasonable to require have a disclosure rule different from a recusal rule.
23 the judge to publicize at least among the members of 23 You've got the recusal rule. If it comes within the 24 rule, the judge needs to put it on the table and recuse.
24 that -- of the parties in the case that there's a basis 25 that someone might reasonably be concerned.
                                                                                  25 There are a few gray areas where a judge might put it on
               CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Judge McCown.
                                                                                    1 the table and the parties might waive it, and the judge HONORABLE F. SCOTT McCOWN: That sounds
                                                                                    2 wants it on the table, and if the parties want to waive 3 good in theory but in practice can't work, because what 3 it or not, fine. But you can't write a rule that says 4 to judges, "These things you have to disclose" that's 5 separate from a rule about "This is when you recuse.' 6 MR. YELENOSKY: Well, but we've said that a judge has to do when the parties and lawyers come 5 before him or her, the judge knows what all his or her 6 relationships are with those parties and lawyers, and if 7 he thinks it's a matter for recusing, he needs to this is a gray area, and I think you've reiterated that, 8 recuse. If he's not prepared to recuse, there's no that sometimes it could be and sometimes it shouldn't, 9 reason to disclose, and if you -- your relationships 10 with lawyers in any community, big or small, are 11 endless. You know, should I disclose that I went to and what you're saying is the judge should make that decision, and once he's made the decision there's no point in anybody second-guessing, and I guess I'm saying 12 that there may be a reason for second-guessing.
12 Joe's house for a Christmas party, though, in fact, he's HONORABLE F. SCOTT McCOWN: No. I'm saying something different. I'm saying you can't define the gray area. You can put a comment down. You can say 13 never invited me I'd like the record to reflect.
               MR. LATTING: I considered it.
               HONORABLE F. SCOTT McCOWN: Should I
16 disclose that Tommy Jacks and I go to the same church?
                                                                                   16 the judges should have integrity and be sensitive, and 17 I mean, it just becomes endless for a judge as to what 17 if they have any doubt they might want to -- or should 18 say something, but there is no way to write a rule that 18 other people might make a big deal out of that the judge 19 is not going to stand aside for.
                                                                                  19 defines the gray area, and there is no way to write a CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Well, and judges 20 rule that requires disclosures.
21 frequently do say at the beginning of a case, "Hey, I 22 know this person or I know that person." I mean, 23 there's often disclosures. "Anybody think that makes a

                                                                                                     HONORABLE PHIL HARDBERGER: I don't know
21 or be a ground for disclosure? Obviously that ain't 21 whether that's an existing relationship or not. I think 22 we could go and list lots of reasons or lots of examples 22 going to happen. I think we ought to move on.
                MR. LATTING: Well, I just - I want to 23 of where it's -- that's a tough call whether it's an 24 existing relationship or not.
24 say one thing. I think we're moving in this CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: No question about 25 committee - we seem to be moving in every one of the discussions I've been to so far toward the notion that that, particularly in the will context. I mean, my wife 2 is a probate lawyer. She has a client. She drafts a 2 the public really doesn't need to know this and this 3 doesn't promote public confidence. I think that person 4 is entitled to think that he got shafted because you 5 went to church with Tommy Jacks. I think that the will. There's an amendment a year from now and -- MR. LOW: What if he's a member of a club and you're doing something -- I think Lillejendol raised that in the Supreme Court, but there are many situations people are entitled to know what the judiciary is doing, 7 where they're getting their money, and who their 8 associations are with, particularly in light of the fact that are hard to define. It's not just like I represent 8 him in a personal injury lawsuit, period.
9 CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Okay. Yeah, Joe.
  9 that we're moving toward an ever more urban society
                                                                                      MR. LATTING: I may be confused, but it seems to me we're talking about two different issues. people don't know these things, and I think there ought to be -- I think we ought to err in the direction of 12 One is whether something is a basis for recusal, disclosure and not privacy or secrecy in judicial proceedings. So that's where I -- 13 mandatory recusal, and the other is whether a court 13 14 ought to disclose a relationship. In the interest of CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Judge Rhea.
                                                                                      15 public confidence and full disclosure doesn't mean 16 necessarily that if you say, "This guy wrote my will 17 seven years ago and I hear from him from time to time," MR. LATTING: - come down on that.
                HONORABLE BILL RHEA: My wife is 17 currently represented by a lawyer, a plaintiff's lawyer, 18 and if I were on the bench my reaction -- I think my 19 action would be to say, "And I don't think that creates 20 any problem, and I don't feel like recusing myself, and 18 in a case, and her lawyer has not yet appeared in my 19 court, but I'm not convinced that absent a specific rule 20 on this it would have occurred to me to think about 21 I'm not going to, but I want you to know about it." 22 CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: We are talking about whether I should recuse or disclose, and it seems to me that even though there is a rabbit trail here we could go down a line of a bunch of different circumstances, 23 two different things. Judge Rhea has got some language that he proposed that we're going to take up after the break that this whole committee, since we're not 24 but this issue of a lawyer representing a judge or I

 1 referring it to the subcommittee, the whole committee is 1 Judge, but I think we ought to send it back to the committee because it's -- at the break Skip and I were talking about it, and the question comes to my mind

 2 going to consider as to whether or not to add an additional ground for recusal, which would be (11) or 4 however we fit it in, and we'll either accept that or 4 there is a distinction between an attorney-client 5 not. You're talking about just disclosing it without 6 any comment on whether that's grounds for recusal or 5 relationship and a fiduciary duty.
6 The fiduciary duty that arises as a 7 result of the relationship is ongoing and continues, 8 keep information confidential. The relationship depends 9 on the scope of the engagement, and if you're engaged not.
 8
              MR. LATTING: That's right.
             HONORABLE F. SCOTT MCCOWN: Could I
10 before we break .
                                                                             10 just to write a will and nothing further, the CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yeah.
                                                                             11 relationship terminates when the will is written, but HONORABLE F. SCOTT McCOWN: Could we vote 12 there are situations where you may have a greater scope 13 on a slightly different question because if I had 13 of that engagement. It might be to continue to monitor 14 estate planning, and I just think because of the 15 complexities of it that it's something that we probably known -- I thought the way you framed the question it was "Do something or move to another issue.
             CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: That was my intent,
                                                                             16 would be better served to allow the committee to 17 but I can see there was ambiguity in it.
                                                                             17 deliberate on it rather than vote today, even though if HONORABLE F. SCOTT MCCOWN: I would vote 18 we had to vote or do nothing, I'm in favor of that 19 to send it to the committee over trying to draft it here proposed change.
20 and would point out, for example, the rule that's been 20
                                                                                          CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Okay. Yeah, Judge 21 proposed doesn't do anything about the fact that every 21 Patterson.
22 single one of us is represented by the Attorney General HONORABLE JAN PATTERSON: Well, I want to 23 and the district attorney and the county attorney on a 23 speak in favor of Judge Rhea's language or sending it to 24 regular basis. It's going to be too complicated to 24 committee. I voted in favor of going to committee just 25 draft here.
                                                                             25 because of that concern. I think we're talking here
             HONORABLE BILL RHEA: Well, the rule as 1 more about a simple bias or economic interest. When 2 proposed talks about the specific lawyer. That's all it you're talking about a lawyer's -- and it may not be says. If you have an Attorney General in Austin wills, but it may be some complex domestic family representing me in Federal court then that lawyer ought not to appear in my court. I would recuse if he does.
                                                                              4 situation, the judge is going to go to -- is going to go 5 to a lawyer. This is the person in whom they have the 6 utmost confidence that it will be hard to shake, so it HONORABLE F. SCOTT McCOWN: I don't think that captures the Attorney General and the D.A., who is is a relationship dealing with life and death problems the elected official whose name is going to be on your very often and is a critical relationship, and I think 8 9 Judge Rhea's language speaks to that, and I would be in 10 favor of it or at least to have it discussed by a pleadings.

              CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Judge Peeples.
             HONORABLE DAVID PEEPLES: On the issue of 11 committee
12 what goes back to the subcommittee, I think that this CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Anybody else?
13 rule, even though I've had some input into it, is rough HONORABLE PHIL HARDBERGER: I think the 14 committee is the best way to go because there is some 15 substance to this, and yet I have some problems with the 14 enough that we shouldn't think we're going to finish it 15 today, and therefore, the committee is going to deal 16 with it again, and everything that we discuss I think is language as suggested. That's what we have committees 17 up for grabs in the subcommittee the next time we meet.
             CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Okay. Good point.
                                                                                          CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yeah. There was a 19 Let's take a break for about ten minutes.
                                                                             19 substantial majority of our group that did not want to send it to the committee. Have we rethought that now?

MR. EDWARDS: Yeah.
              (Whereupon a recess was taken.)

                                                                             20 CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Okay. I'm going to 21 22 pass around two lists, one which has the e-mail 22 HONORABLE BILL RHEA: And I think the addresses that we have for everybody, and the second 17 doesn't give a standard for a judge to go by, but if 18 there's a disclosure requirement it ought to be on the 17 to do it.

               HONORABLE SARAH DUNCAN: But if it's the 19 sense of the group that we should be doing that, I say 20 let's have a rule. If the AG is representing me in, you 19 accepted grounds of recusal and not on one that we can't even agree is a ground for recusal.

    that's fine. Just tell me what the rule is.
                                                                                 22 what the disclosure rule would have as a sanction for CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yeah. To me it sounds 23 failure to do it. So I wonder if this is better handled 24 like it's a distinction between active representation 24 as a judicial ethics issue for disclosure rather than a

    You've got a relationship going on at the same time the case is going on.
               MR. LOW: But in the will situation if it's not disclosed it's not waived.

                                                                                  13 we are not going to make it a ground for recusal such as 14 the hunting lease, there would be no sanction.
               CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yeah. Carl.
               MR. HAMILTON: It seems to me that if we single out any particular attorney-client relationship HONORABLE SARAH DUNCAN: Well, one 16 then that give us problems because we can't name them 17 all, and even by naming that, why name that instead of a 16 question I have on the disclosure aspect of it is I 17 think maybe if we're going to require disclosure we need 18 business relationship or something else as a grounds.
19 So it seems to me that if these grounds are covered 20 under item No. (1), (b)(1), that what we really need is 18 to tell judges what they need to disclose because that's 19 going to vary with each judge as to what they think they 20 do need to disclose. I mean, it's like Orsinger. I'm 21 happy to disclose that. I'm happy to recuse, but maybe 21 a disclosure rule which simply says that the judge has 22 to disclose if he or his wife is currently being 23 represented by any party in the litigation, and he has we need a set of rules to tell us what to do
                                                                                  23 CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Uh-huh. Well, on this 24 that duty anyway except there's just no rule that says 24 whole issue of -- 25 that.
                                                                                  25
                                                                                                 MR. WATSON: Can I just take it back,

 1 And if he's required by rule to make the 2 disclosure, he has to decide, "Do I want to disclose the take the whole issue back? I was just asking a question 2 if it had been considered or not.
 3 fact that I go hunting with this lawyer every weekend?
4 Do I want to disclose the fact that he's representing me 5 in a lawsuit?" He has to decide to make the disclosure, CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yeah. Thanks, Skip.
                                                                                                 MR. ORSINGER: That's the danger of throwing something out in a committee CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yeah. That's right.
 6 and then once it's made then the lawyer can decide whether he wants to ask for recusal under (b)(1), but I Well, do we have a consensus that maybe this issue of a think the disclosure is a better way to do it than lawyer representing the judge that he's appearing in trying to write a rule to cover all the situations.
                                                                                      front of on behalf of a party ought to be considered accomplish is that if a judge has something that he or 9 a -- you know, I mean, I don't have any privacy interest 10 once you run for office, but you know, you're not 11 worried about this when the parties settle. You don't she knows that the people of this courtroom ought to 11 know about that might reasonably reflect on the 12 impartiality of the judge, the judge ought to say so and 13 not sit there quiet about it. That's all. It's very 14 simple. Now, it may be difficult, but it's not complex.

                                                                                 12 care when the parties settle. It doesn't matter. You 13 don't care about this if the person who the judge was 14 arguably biased in favor of loses. The only reason HONORABLE HARVEY BROWN: I somewhat beg 15 these ever come up and the ones the public gets upset 16 to differ about whether it's complex just in the sense 16 about is like whatever the case was where the big gas 17 of it's a very amorphous, vague standard. If I'm going 17 pipeline got hit for a huge verdict and it turned out 18 the judge -- then of course people started hunting 19 around for a connection. Then they find the connection, 18 to disclose something that might cause my impartiality 19 to be reasonably questioned, what you think that is and 20 what I think that is are very different, and I think 20 and then the judge recuses, and they set it aside and do 21 a new trial. Who's offended by that? Nobody.
   Tommy Jacks at church is a good example. Is it Tommy 22 Jacks at my church if my church is a hundred people, 20 people, Second Baptist in Houston, you know, with 5000
                                                                                                It is a waste of time, but that's -- the 23 incentive for judges right now to disclose is not to 24 or 10,000 people? I just think that's a pretty 24 waste time because if I disclose it up front nobody 25 amorphous standard that would be hard for judges.
                                                                                 25 moves to recuse. Then it's waived, and that's the end

               CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yeah. If you leave it of it, but if you get to "I've got to disclose it" then 2 kind of vague like this, aren't you -- I mean, if the 2 what's going to happen when somebody catches me on one, judge discloses it, have you not almost answered the fact that he ought to be recused?
                                                                                  3 and I have oral hearings, and I can't look through these 5 show up at that hearing or I don't know of your MR. LOW: Right. That's going to raise 6 association, and then if I rule one way, the headline in 7 the paper is "Judge Violates Disclosure Law" because 8 this is what the press loves. They love disclosure 6 many recusals.

               CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: That's the problem.
               HONORABLE HARVEY BROWN: Because I raised it that means I think it might cause my impartiality.
                                                                                     laws, and they hate violation of disclosure laws, and
               MR. LOW: Right.
                                                                                  10 they love to say we have broke the law by not

               CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Or might reasonably be 12 questioned, well, I've disclosed it because somebody 12 how-to-embarrass-judges in my view.
                                                                                                MR. LATTING: Well, it sounds like a good 13 might reasonably question it.
                                                                                  13 MR. LATTING: The converse seems to me to 14 rule to me, Judge.
 15 be a worse situation, namely that the judge knows, has 15 HONORABLE SCOTT BRISTER: Look, you're 16 actual active knowledge of something that might 17 reasonably call his or her impartiality into question, 16 already paying us less than a first year associate. Now 17 you want to shame us, too.
18 yet decides not to disclose that. How can that be a good situation?

                                                                                  19 withdraw that comment.
               CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: It can't, but under CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Well, and, remember, 20
21 that circumstance wouldn't a judge recuse himself 21 Joe is the guy that didn't want cameras in the 22 courtroom.

               MR. LATTING: He should, but there is an
                                                                                                MR. EDWARDS: Well, I think we ought to 24 area where someone might think that is -- might think 24 get you a raise. The heck with -- 25 that it's grounds for recusal, and he or she discloses CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Okay. Richard, you're
  1 it, and the lawyers say, "No, we don't think so," or it 2 gets explored and worked out. It just doesn't seem to going to look at all this stuff. One last comment, 2 Judge Brown.
  3 me to do harm, and it seems to me to inform the public, HONORABLE HARVEY BROWN: If you're going 4 and that seems to me to be a good principle, so that's 4 to look at disclosure rules, you might as a starting 5 why I'm harping on it.
                                                                                      point look at the disclosure rules for arbitrators MR. YELENOSKY: Well, I think the because at least there is some case law on that for a difference is what I was getting back to before with Judge McCown is there are these close calls where it guide.
                                                                                                CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Thanks. Let's move
                                                                                 9 on. Is there anything before we get to (b)(9) and (10)?
10 Is there anything in (1) through (8) that needs revision 11 or change or study? We've already made one change to 12 (b)(3), "the judge has been or is likely to be a 13 material witness," and we've deleted the italicized 14 phrase from (b)(8), which said "or a member of such reasonably could be questioned, and the judge -- Judge 10 McCown would have in his own mind, even those close 11 calls, he would make the decision, and if he made the 12 decision that he wasn't going to recuse then it did not 13 need to be second-guessed by anyone, and I think the 14 rule of disclosure would say on those close calls that 15 it should be subject to being questioned by others, and 15 lawyer's firm.
                                                                                  Anything else? Okay. Seeing nothing 17 then, let's go to (9) and (10). Richard, you want to 16 it does require the judge to make some decision about 17 what a close call is.
               For instance, I'm the judge and this firm 18 tell us what you've done here?
 19 has hired my son, I think that would be one you want to MR. ORSINGER: Well, basically this is 20 the last proposal from the last time, isn't it, Carl?
 20 disclose even though you may have in your own mind 21 determined that this is my long-estranged son who I want 22 to have nothing to do with and, therefore, when we get MR. HAMILTON: Yes, it is.
                                                                                                 MR. ORSINGER: Since the debate, though 23 Bob Pemberton has further explored this issue of the 23 down to looking at it I won't be recused, but by 24 appearances, that's something that ought to be disclosed 24 mandatory nature of these campaign contribution limits, 25 and see the light of day.
                                                                                  25 sent a memo out, and I think Bob ought to share his

                                                                                       MR. YELENOSKY: No.
MR. PEMBERTON: Okay. Well, I guess I've kind of gone back and forth. You may think I'm foolish, but at least I'm intellectually honest or trying to be.
                                                                                       HONORABLE ЛІМ DUNNAM: Yeah. If I say 3 I'm opting out and I'm running against you, but also the 4 limits don't apply to you, which makes them voluntary as 5 In our last meeting, as you remember, Representative 6 Dunnam and I got into an exchange about whether the to you. Right?
                                                                                       MR. YELENOSKY: After you've acted, yeah. campaign contribution limits under the Judicial Campaign HONORABLE JIM DUNNAM: If I say I'm Fairness Act were mandatory or not mandatory.
Representative Dunnam's and many of yours impression was opting out and I'm running against Bob then all of the sudden Bob is totally voluntary on everything.
10 they are the sort of thing -- they were purely voluntary
                                                                                       MR. YELENÖSKY: Assuming that you've done 11 that you could opt into.
                                                                          11 that and the Ethics Commission has issued a declaration.
             My recollection as I was relating it from
                                                                          12
                                                                                       HONORABLE JIM DUNNAM: If I opt out, 13 our Judicial Campaign Finance Task Force was that they 13 everything is voluntary for him, and expenditures are were mandatory, and on that basis the committee voluntary for me.

                                                                                   of a campaign, and so I think we better make it clear 2 out of the spending limits but not the contribution 2 that if there is a cure at some point then it doesn't limits, but if the first judge opts out of the spending 3 work a recusal.
    limits, the second judge is liberated from all limits.
                                                                                              CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Steve.
MR. YELENOSKY: Well, the report that Bob Correct?
              MR. PEMBERTON: That's my understanding. presented spoke to that, and they had suggested because the rule on contribution limits, if you violate it also MR. YELENOSKY: Right.
              CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Right. So it's says you have to give it back, and so the report 8 generally applicable, but you can get out of it in suggested that it would be -- the recusal would be -- or 10 certain circumstances.
                                                                                10 the eligibility for recusal would end when they had MR. YELENOSKY: The part that I was 11 given it back and something about the term of office 12 fooling with with Bob was can you get out of it, no. A 13 candidate cannot do anything himself unilaterally which 14 gets him or her out of the contribution limits. It has 12 ending that I wasn't quite clear on.
                                                                               But even before you get to that question, which is a question in this rule, I think you still need 15 to be the action of someone else, because if I'm the 15 to answer that prior question about whether "excessive" 16 means that the judge got a contribution that exceeds17 these limits or the judge got a contribution that 16 candidate who exceeds any of these provisions then I'm 17 letting everybody else out except myself, so in that 18 sense it's never voluntary.
                                                                                18 exceeds these limits and was not entitled to do so, 19 It is voluntary in the sense once someone 20 else acts then you're free, but you're going to know because you can certainly have the situation where the
                                                                                20 limits have been lifted, and so which do we mean?
21 that happens because it has to happen pursuant to an 22 Ethics Commission declaration. So I guess the easy 23 thing to say is if you're a candidate and there's been If, for instance, you're in a judicial 22 office with a population more than a million and the judge has a 6,000-dollar contribution from the other
24 no declarations from the Ethics Commission that it's 24 attorney, is that enough for us to say it's excessive 25 lifted, it applies to you; and even if there has been a 25 because it's above the 5,000-dollar limit, or do we also
                                                                                1 need to check and see if, in fact, the limits as applied 2 to that particular judicial candidate were lifted?
    declaration from the Ethics Commission that it's lifted, 2 if it was lifted because of you it's not lifted as to you; and that's essentially what it comes down to.
                                                                                              MR. ORSINGER: Agreed. I think we need CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Representative Dunnam, do you agree with that more or less?
                                                                                 4 to answer that question, and that's a separate question 5 from the one I'm raising because as a practical matter HONORABLE JIM DUNNAM: I think that's the campaign contributions all get deposited and then probably right. I'll tell you that there's a lot of you get periodic reports on where the money is from, and confusion on that. It doesn't make sense, but -- if you're saying that every single judge has got to CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: On the issue of update the report before they deposit the check, I think 10 whether we should even be messing with this, the point 11 you raised at our last meeting whether we should even be 10 that's unworkable. So we have to allow a judge to cure 11 in the event that they inadvertently take a contribution 12 messing with this, I have gone back and looked at the 13 order of the Court, of the Supreme Court, and it 12 in excess, and that's separate from Steve's point.
                                                                                              CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Will you fix that, 14 Richard, by saying the judge has accepted and not 15 refunded? Buddy. specifically charged us with messing with this; and then 15 I've consulted with Chief Justice Phillips, and he wants 16 us to mess with it, but duly noting your issue about the MR. LOW: Yeah. Chip, I have one other 17 question. Isn't it true that a lawyer may give a legislative sentiment, at least in some quarters, which 18 Senator Harris I think in our meeting agreed with and certain amount and then firms then are limited.
    said that politically this might not be the smartest CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Right.
MR. LOW: The way I read the rule it says 19 20 thing for the Court to do; but that's not for us to 20 21 decide. We just have to try to come up with the best 22 rule we can, so that's what we're about today.
                                                                                    "the lawyer representing the party or any lawyer in that 22 firm." Maybe no lawyer in that firm has given more than MR. ORSINGER: If I can in that 23 a lawyer's limit but totally then the firm has exceeded 24 connection, Senator Harris, though, was agreeable to 24 the limit. I guess you could technically say that once 25 allowing the Supreme Court to use its repealer authority 25 you get your amount then anybody in that firm has done

                                                                                 3 more, and I don't think it directly addresses that.
  3 fundamental philosophy.
               CHAÎRMAN BABCOCK: Right.
                                                                                              MR. ORSINGER: I think he's right.
               MR. ORSINGER: So assuming we get that CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Good point. I agree.
  6 consent from him that he approves our final product, Let's stick on this refund issue. Richard, if you said we're going to have voluntary acceptance by that legislator of the change in his bill, which is different "the judge has accepted and not refunded"
                                                                                              MR. ORSINGER: Well, how does the statute handle inadvertent excessive contribution? from this 10 HONORABLE JAN PATTERSON: I think the way 11 the statute reads, and I don't see it here, is that it CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yeah. That's not on
 11 this issue, though.
               MR. ORSINGER: Not on this precise issue.
                                                                                12 is deemed accepted at the time of reporting so that 12 13 there is a gap which allows for multiple checks to come CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yeah. That's on the 14 multiple recusal motion, which is different. Okay. So in, but perhaps you don't catch it and you might deposit 15 with that underbrush cleared away to a certain degree, 15 them on the day they come in, but you don't catch it 16 until a week later, but it's within the reporting 17 period. I think the statute speaks in terms of 16 is this rule okay as you've drafted it?
 17 MR. ORSINGER: Well, you know, I'd like 18 to ask the question if "excessive" means before or after 18 acceptance in terms of reporting so that there is leeway

19 refunds, because I think it possible that a judge who in 20 good faith is attempting to comply might find out after 21 the fact that a contribution was made and then refunded, but this "accepted a campaign contribution," you know the campaign contributions are accepted when the checks 24 are deposited, I suppose, and the tallying up isn't done 25 until later after all the checks come in over a period

HONORABLE DAVID PEEPLES: As someone who

4 hold it -- if we're going to do this is to hold it to 5 the statute. That would be my inclination simply 7 their language, and if their procedure and language 8 requires you to correct by the time you file your report, to me it's a little disingenuous for a judge to 10 take an excessive contribution and then the day before 11 they start into a trial to refund it. That's just a

MR. ORSINGER: My inclination would be to April 7, 2000, Morning Session

  statute that probably most of us wouldn't agree on how 2 it works then we're way off legislating ourselves.
                CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Justice Duncan.
                HONORABLE SARAH DUNCAN: The statute 5 refers to "a knowing acceptance of a contribution in 6 excess of the limits," and I'm not sure how the Ethics Commission is going to adjudicate the "knowingly," but is that going to be a prerequisite to recusal under the subsection? Because there's no -- under (a), section

(a), there's no -- there is a requirement that it be knowingly accepted, an excessive contribution; and in 12 the case of spouses or changing the aggregate by a 13 lawyer changing firms, I at least would argue that I did not knowingly accept a contribution in excess of the 15 limits and so did not violate that section.

HONORABLE DAVID PEEPLES: Maybe we need 17 an affirmative defense for good faith mistake. HONORABLE JIM DUNNAM: Can I ask a 19 question?

CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Representative Dunnam. 20 21 HONORABLE JIM DUNNAM: I'm trying to 22 understand how this is going to work if, again, Bob and 23 I are running against each other and I opt out, okay, which means he can take excessive contributions, okay, 25 if he wants to, and let's say he does. Is the intent to

Page 1051 1 contributions and then merged later on and then it puts 2 them over the top or something like that. You've got 3 lawyers that may be up against the max, leave one law

4 firm and join another law firm, and it puts the firm 5 over the top. It's not all that clear-cut necessarily. HON. ANN CRAWFORD MCCLURE: The other problem that I think we run into is it applies to the lawyer's spouse who may also be a lawyer practicing with 9 another firm someplace which you may not have ready 10 access to that information if you're talking about 11 extremely large law firms.

For example, in my campaigns I've raised 13 money out of Houston out of particular groups who were 14 interested in opinions that I may write, family law 15 being one of them. I have no way of knowing without 16 doing some significant investigation whether a lawyer who contributes out of Fulbright is married to a lawyer 18 that may practice with Vinson & Elkins or vice versa. 19 So it may not be readily apparent as far as the 20 aggregate is concerned without some independent 21 investigation going on, and that's problematic because 22 that information doesn't come without phone calls.

CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Does this rule as 24 drafted cover spouses?

HONORABLE SCOTT BRISTER: No, but the statute does. MR. ORSINGER: Well, I think the excessive contribution as defined I think does pick up that statutory definition. That would be aggregate.

HONORABLE DAVID PEEPLES: Doesn't the contribution of a spouse count on the lawyer's aggregate amount?

CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: I don't know. HONORABLE DAVID PEEPLES: In other words, 10 if the limit is 5,000 for the lawyer and the lawyer has 11 given that amount, I don't think the spouse can give any 12 more.

HONORABLE HARVEY BROWN: Right. Right. HON. ANN CRAWFORD MCCLURE: Well, I think

15 that's true, but if it's less than that. MR. ORSINGER: The aggregate is what 17 really frightens me about this whole thing because 18 lawyers that change law firms can change aggregates when 19 they change law firms and it's not even a thought in 20 their mind, and it may even occur after the race, and I tell you, we're going to need some experts on this tell you, we're going to need some experts on this tatute to help us write a rule if we're going to do anything other than just implement the statute in all of tis glorious confusion. If we're trying to get real

25 specific about how all of this applies in the face of a

Page 1054 say that if Bob wins the election Bob can be recused for taking those allowable excessive contributions that he's permitted to take under the statute?

CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: I would say not. MR. YELENOSKY: That was my question. MR. ORSINGER: Well, then we would be going further than the Legislature did. We would be saying even though the law permits it, you can't do it without being recused.

10 HONORABLE JIM DUNNAM: So my question --11 so I'll make sure I understand what you-all are trying 12 to do. If I take an excessive contribution for which 13 the statute provides no exception, okay, why aren't you-all disciplining the judge and reprimanding him 15 because he's violated the law, enacting a rule like that 16 that says any judge who violates the law is subject to 17 reprimand? The recusal bit -- I mean, if the judge 19 violates the law, he should be removed from the bench, 20 if that's what the law is. If the law says I can't take 21 a contribution in excess of the limits and I do it, so 22 what, we're going to recuse him. That judge ought to be 23 removed. He just violated the law. I don't know if does that stuff. Maybe that's some of the confusion I've got, and it seems that we're going to recuse him. This is a guy that shouldn't even be on the bench or he should have been reprimanded or he should have been censured or he should have been whatever because he

1 focus of the committee. Any judge who violates the law, 2 whether it's this one or another one, is subject to disciplinary action from the Judicial Council or whoever

MS. MCNAMARA: But if you're a litigant you don't want to have to go to trial in front of him 13 before that process takes place.

10 violated the statute.

HONORABLE JIM DUNNAM: Then all you have 15 to say is "Any judge who violates the law is subject to 16 recusal." Any judge who violates this statute is 17 subject to recusal, and you don't have to go into the 18 finance and who he took it from or whatever. The 19 statute speaks for itself. If he violated the statute, 20 he's subject to recusal. But I would also suggest that 21 if there's not a rule that there ought to be one that says any judge who violates the law, including this one, is subject to disciplinary action, and that is -- and 24 that's why I ask the question. Is this supposed to 25 apply to Bob who legally took an excessive contribution

 2 mean it to apply to him, then really all you want it to 2 Representative Dunnam's answer to that would be you know 3 apply to is men and women who are violating the statute.
                                                                              because you've got the campaign finance reports signed MR PEMBERTON: Yeah, and I'd agree just speaking from the perspective of the task force, they understood that these limits would be mandatory and under oath by the officeholder.
                                                                                         HONORABLE SARAH DUNCAN: But I don't know 6 that the two people each of whom gave me $5,000 are overlooked the waiver provision. So the intent wasn't

 9 only if Bob violated the limits.
                                                                            9

             CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: And that's certainly 10

             HONORABLE JIM DUNNAM: All you have to MS. McNAMARA: You've got an apparent

13 say is any judge who violates this act is subject to 13 violation. To answer your question, you do some 14 recusal. He ought to be subject to disciplinary action 14 discovery or something.
                                                                                         MR. ORSINGER: Well, the term "knowing" 15 first.
             CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: That's pretty close to 16 would apply if the contribution on its face is in excess 17 what the task force said. Steve, then Sarah.

18 MR. YELENOSKY: Well, Representative 17 from one person, that's one thing. If it's aggregating 18 between people you don't know are connected then 19 Dunnam, I expressed pretty much the same sentiment as 20 that last time when I said, yeah, if a judge violates 19 obviously you wouldn't know that.
                                                                                         CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yeah. They have got
21 this act why are we just recusing him? He should not be 21 different last names, maybe even live in different

              At the same time I'm wondering because of HONORABLE SARAH DUNCAN: You just never based on that because of the opt out, and that-3 folded into the language that we've used in (9) and HONORABLE JIM DUNNAM: That's why I asked (10)?

                                                                               MR. YELENOSKY: Well, 253.155 is the language that has -- or is the section that has this question. Evidently that's not what the committee is considering, so -- 6
                                                                               "knowingly" in (a), but the violation is (f), and in MR. YELENOSKY: Well, I guess I was 8 between is (e), which says that you can -- you need to 8 thinking you could have something that's not a violation 9 of the law but nonetheless is so apparently excessive 9 give it back, and you need to give it back within a 10 that you would want to have a ground for recusal, but I 10 certain time period.
11 can see the point that that's -- that would be getting 11 HONORABLE BILL RHEA: But what we key 12 to us legislating too much, and it would be just easier 13 to say "violation of the law." The problem there I 14 guess is you've got the "knowingly" test, and you 15 wouldn't have a violation of the law if the judge just 12 this to is the language "excessive campaign 13 contribution."
                                                                                         MR. YELENOSKY: Well, there is no such 14 15 language in the statute.
16 says, "I didn't know until I'm in trial."
                                                                                         HONORABLE BILL RHEA: Well, maybe that's HONORABLE JIM DUNNAM: He's going to know 17 the language we need to adjust.
                                                                                         CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Well, it does say that 18 it because he signed a campaign finance report under the 18 19 penalty of perjury, and if he signs a campaign finance 20 report that says, "I took X contribution," I think 21 that's pretty good evidence that he knew he took it.
                                                                            19 a judicial candidate or officeholder may exceed the 20

                                                                               We're talking about two things, campaign contribution in (9) and direct campaign expenditure in (10). The phrase "excessive" modifies those two concepts as defined by context of a recusal motion, or does the recusal motion have to await an adjudication of the violation by the Ethics Commission?
                                                                                         MR. ORSINGER: But the statute is in the MR YELENOSKY: Well, and the statute itself has an ambiguity on "knowingly" because it has tab at the end of Tab 4 if you want to read the statute.

MR. YELENOSKY: Even understanding 10 that provision in there that says you have to give the "excessive" to simply refer to exceeding these limits 11 money back, and there is a time period to do that. Does 12 that then define the "knowingly"? In other words, is it you still have Representative Dunnam's comment that I'm echoing that it doesn't answer the question if you're 13 not knowingly if you met that give-back provision and 13 exceeding those limits but you're within the law because 14 it's been lifted, and so I mean, that may be a question 15 we can answer. Are we trying to do something beyond 16 what the statute does? If the answer to that is "no" just on its own terms its ambiguous there. So I don't 15 know, but you know, even if we understood what we wanted 16 to do, it's not clear what the statute means on that.
              CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: And, Sarah, in answer 17 then maybe we are just saying in violation of the 18 to your question, I don't know how you could possibly 18 statute, whatever it means.
19 wait for a decision of the Ethics Commission. I mean, HONORABLE BILL RHEA: I'm not following
                                                                            20 that distinction because if the limits have been lifted you're going to hold up the litigation process while the 21 Ethics Commission does its work?
                                                                            21 then you're not exceeding them, right?
                                                                                         HONORABLE SCOTT BRISTER: Right.
              HONORABLE SARAH DUNCAN: But how are you 23 going to have a recusal motion based on an excessive MR. YELENOSKY: Well, but this section is contribution as defined in 251.001 unless you know in 24 not the one that lifts them, so one would read this

              CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yeah, let's put this 1 degree to contribute to political campaigns?
2 issue to rest because this is not -- I don't think that 3 this is even a close call. Is there anybody here who HON. ANN CRAWFORD MCCLURE: Well, then if 3 we're going to take the position that we're only going 4 to deal with the unlawful contributions then I agree 5 with whoever it was -- it might have been Representative 6 Dunnam -- that said if we follow under the category of thinks that we ought to try to in this recusal rule go beyond what the Legislature has done in the statute so that we would specifically call for the recusal of a 7 if it's illegal, he's violated the law, and that ought 8 to be a separate thing. I'm not sure that we need to be 9 having this debate if that's the intention in putting it judge who has received excessive campaign contributions but nevertheless gotten a waiver so that it's perfectly legal for them to do so? Anybody who thinks we're doing that? Mike?
                                                                                    10 into the rule, is that there's been a violation of some
              MR. HATCHELL: Well, I don't know that 11 sort of law. I think that's a whole other question.
12 I'd -- I'm the only member, I guess, other than Bob of HONORABLE PHIL HARDBERGER: I also would 13 the task force, and I just wanted to tell the group that 13 agree with Representative Dunnam. If you're going to we did not really consider this question of the opt out, 14 insist on keeping it, and I submit it's virtually 15 useless, but if you're going to insist, I would tie it 16 to the statute just like Representative Dunnam says.
15 but I would say as a member that what I was thinking we 16 were trying to do was something that was actually very 17 simple and that is make the statute a litmus test.
                                                                                                  CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yeah, Buddy.
                                                                                   17
                                                                                                  MR. LOW: Chip, we have three things
               CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Right.
               MR. HATCHELL: And we were not thinking 19 Phil suggested just deleting it. Mike suggested don't 20 so much of the operation of the statute but that the 20 worry about the technicalities. I mean, if you waive, 21 don't worry about all that if you give a certain amount; 22 isn't that right, Mike? Then the other ground is don't levels of campaign contributions which had been declared 22 in the statute were the point at which the appearance of 23 impropriety arose. So actually I would take the do anything but just say you don't violate the statute position as a task force member that even when somebody 24 We've talked, and if there is another ground, I would be 25 opted out and could receive contributions in excess of 25 open to it, but that's the three I hear and that looks like what we ought to vote on.

                                                                                                  HONORABLE PHIL HARDBERGER: Agreed.
 2 recusal.
               MR. YELENOSKY: So that was -- and that CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Everybody agree with 3 that? Judge Peeples.
 4 is reflected in the fact that the rule picks out 5 HONORABLE DAVID PEEPLES: I want to make 6 sure I understand how this works. If there's a judge or 7 a challenger who says "I'm going to opt out of these particular sections rather than just saying "in violation of the statute." I mean, it refers to the sections that have the limits, and that's why the question arose, but it sounds like people aren't going to want to go where you're going, Mike. voluntary limits and therefore I can accept $50,000 from HONORABLE PHIL HARDBERGER: Mr. Chairman?

                                                                                    10 MR. ORSINGER: That's not right. That's CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yes, Justice
                                                                                    11 not right.

                                                                                    12 HONORABLE PHIL HARDBERGER: I submit that contributions.
14 this is a fairly useless addition here and will almost MR. ORSINGER: You can't opt out of contributions. You can only opt out of expenditures, 15 affect nobody; and the truth is you're talking around within the law that might, in fact, play on recusal.

18 For instance, you won't have to say a thing if a firm

19 has given you $25,000. You don't have to say anything.
                                                                                    17 free of contributions or expenditures.
18 MR. YELENOSKY: Right. That's right.
                                                                                                   MS. MCNAMARA: If you think about it,

               HON. ANN CRAWFORD MCCLURE: Well, the taint is in the money; and if the perception is that it's the money that's buying some sort of favor, I think we're just dealing with semantics over how much of a

                                                                                    14 contributed a million dollars to your campaign last 15 month that you can't recuse him. It's just that you 14 somehow fallen into a loophole because you've got a 15 candidate who has waived it and, therefore, you're free 16 to do whatever. That doesn't remove the taint, and we can't recuse him under this statute. If the acceptance

20 CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: But how can you say 21 that there's a per se ground for recusal when the Yeah, Richard.
                                                                                    19
                                                                                                   MR. ORSINGER: I don't want us to forget 20 21 that there are some people, myself included, that don't 22 think we ought to be including these because it's a 22 Legislature has said that the judge is acting properly 23 and you've got lots of case law that say that campaign 23 legislative function and not a judicial function. I 24 agree that practically, as Justice Hardberger said, this 24 contributions of whatever amount is not a basis for 25 isn't going to arise very often, but I personally think 25 recusal, and there is a constitutional right to some

   that the legislative enactment was probably the result 1 adjudicated the violation. And I realize, you know, of a compromise and that some legislators voted for this bill on the grounds that it didn't have anymore teeth in Chip, that you don't want to hold up the matter in litigation unless and until the Ethics Commission it than it did, and if it had had more teeth in it, I adjudicates a penalty, but I don't know -- otherwise we're going to litigate the subject matter that's delegated to the Ethics Commission in a recusal motion, think that the vote might have been different or the bill might not have been enacted.
 7 I know that the legislators who supported 8 this would like to have the Supreme Court with its and I question whether that would be a proper rule.
                                                                                    8 CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Well, in light of what 9 Mike -- yeah, I see your point. In light of what Mike 10 has said, maybe the fact that we have gotten tied into 9 rule-making authority come and put teeth into the 10 statute, but I'm worried about the legislators who opposed the bill or voted on the bill on the condition 11 the statute is what's causing us the problem. Was it that it didn't have teeth now have the bill with teeth 12 the sense of your committee that there is a number -- 13 for example, if Chip Babcock contributes $10,000 to 14 Judge Schmidt and he accepts $10,000 and that $10,000 is 13 through the Supreme Court rule-making authority, and now 14 those legislators are angry and you know the others are 15 happy. And I've talked to two Senators about this who 15 twice what I'm allowed to give him under this statute, 16 neither one of them really had a burning issue on this, regardless of whether he opted in or opted out that that 17 and they both felt like it was politically unwise.

Now, I know it's not our vote of what's just per se creates an appearance of impropriety and then he ought to be out of the case?
19 wise and not wise for the Supreme Court to do, but I'm
                                                                                                    MR. HATCHELL: The members of the task 20 force -- and I don't want to speak for all of them, but 21 it's a really good group from both sides of the 20 going to vote against including this because, first of 21 all, we can't agree on what it means or how it's going 22 to be implemented. Second of all, it probably won't 22 spectrum -- probably believed that, but then the 23 make much difference in anyone's lives; and, thirdly, 23 question becomes at what point do you commence recusal, 24 there are going to be some legislators over there who 24 and we were trying to give really deference to the 25 become angered about this particular issue and allow 25 Legislature, what it had done in this statute, by simply
   that feeling to spill over into other rule-making areas referencing that point as one in which the law has come

    2 into play, and certainly nobody can argue with that.
    3 We are acutely aware of Justice where I think it is the Supreme Court's business.

    CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Well, let me just - 4 can I respond to this? No. 1, it is their sense that if 4 Hardberger's comments about the breadth of what we're proposing and that it probably won't catch a lot of people and it does not solve the problem of the public's we pass a rule that is tied to the statute -- in other words, if the statute has been violated that is a ground for recusal, I can't imagine that Representative Dunnam perception of the influence of money in the litigation, -- maybe I'm misreading this.

                                                                                         but this was the best we could do after five or six HONORABLE ЛМ DUNNAM: I don't think meetings
10 that -- the thing that gave people heartburn I think

11 last session was the committee report, if you read their 12 committee report that came out, it was basically saying
                                                                                     MR. YELENOSKY: Well, I guess I don't want to get in between the Legislature and the Supreme 15 people heartburn is that you were taking voluntary 16 here which goes to the Court's interpretive authority17 and not just the Texas Supreme Court but the Federal 16 provisions that for some reason the Legislature tried to 17 make -- decided to make voluntary, had to have been a 18 compromise because a lot of people could go either way.

                                                                                     18 courts, and there's a lawsuit filed now on that very the agenda. It's got a Bates number, I'm sorry, down on more discussion. I also think that the Chief Justice is very interested in this proceeding with good pace.

                                                                                    the bottom. 70.
                                                                                JUSTICE HECHT: Yes. Yes. No, this was -- I don't know. I mean, Representative Dunnam CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: There's no question 10 11 about that. I don't think -- we're right about that, knows more about the Senate branch by far than I do, but 12 aren't we?
                                                                                 13 I do know that people like Senator Ellis, who was JUSTICE HECHT: Well, that's complicated, 14 instrumental in the statute being passed in the first 14 too. I took your recommendation back to the Court after 15 place, has been encouraging in his comments about the 16 Court looking at this. So I don't want to misrepresent 15 the last meeting, which was that we not do anything, and 16 my impression was -- I actually thought we voted, but I 17 must have been unclear about that. But my impression 17 his position. I really don't know what it is, and he 18 was that the Court was inclined to accept the 18 may change his mind, but I think what we have to come up 19 committee's recommendation and not do anything further, 19 with is what we think is the best solution to the 20 problem and then if there are other reasons why we ought 20 but then there were other communications with other 21 legislators, and it sounded as if others might still be 21 not to do it, then so be it.
                                                                                               MR. LATTING: Is that different from what 22 interested in doing something, so I think on balance 22
23 then the Court decided that we needed to get the best Chip said impliedly?
                                                                                 JUSTICE HECHT: No. I mean, we can't decide whether it is good politics or makes for a good 24 recommendation we could get from the committee and then 25 see what to do.
               CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yeah. While you were 1 relationship between the branches of government for us 2 to change this rule this way or this way or not change out of the room that's what I told everybody was the 3 it at all, I don't think.
  3 feeling of the Chief on this matter.
               JUSTICE HECHT: Yeah. So it's not, you
                                                                                                MR. LATTING: Well, I heard Chip 5 know, do this or else, but we do feel like there's 6 conflicting views. We're getting conflicting 7 indications from the Legislature, so we just need to do 8 due diligence work here and then we will be ready to do suggesting in effect that we make a violation of the statute grounds for recusal and leave it at that, and I was just wondering if you think that would satisfy what you need to happen.
                                                                                                JUSTICE HECHT: Well, I think what the whichever.
               CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Also while you were Court would like to know is from the practicing Bar, 10 11 out of the room something that to me is significant came 12 up, and that is that if this -- if our recusal rule is 11 from just -- if you were just -- politics aside and 12 everything else aside, if you were looking at these 13 issues, what would you want to see happen? This, 13 doing nothing more than tying to the statute then at 14 least it's Representative Dunnam's view that that nothing, or what? And then the rest of it will just 15 wouldn't kick up a fuss with the Legislature because 16 there are opt out provisions, and if we incorporate that 15 have to work itself out as it does.
                                                                                                CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Richard.
                                                                                 16 17 and give deference to that in our recusal rule then MR. ORSINGER: Chip, I may be 18 oversimplifying, but it seems to me like there is three 19 proposals we have discussed and one that was just raised 18 that's not going to raise a political issue with the 19 Legislature, which strikes me as right, because all we 20 would be saying is, "Look, we've got a statute. It's 21 very complicated, but if a judge and a lawyer or his law 22 firm violate it then the judge ought to be recused." 20 I think by Bill Edwards. One, we could make no mention 21 of this because it may not affect very much or because 22 of the politics or whatever. Two, we could make our 23 rule be only if the statute is violated then you have a 24 recusal ground and that buys into all the problems of

25 the statute. Three, we could take the statutory limits

Justice Duncan points out, however, that 25 because there is a subjective element to a violation of 1 necessarily knowing as we interpret it in other whether you have a waiver or not, you're limited, and if you exceed it, you can recuse out; but I think that there was another proposal, which is if Canon 5 has been adopted then we could also say that if you violate Canon 5 that you can be recused. CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: But Canon 5 is tied to

1 and have our own enforcement procedure. Regardless of 9 MR. ORSINGER: Well, but Canon 5 is sort 10 of tied to the statute. It just says that "You shall 11 not knowingly commit an act for which the act" --12 "commit an act for which the" capital A, "Act imposes 13 the penalty and contributions returned in accordance with the Act are not a violation of the paragraph." So 15 but there is some logic in saying that if you violate 16 the Canons of Judicial Ethics that you could be recused 17 that maybe is a little bit different from saying that --

HONORABLE SARAH DUNCAN: There's something real strange about deciding whether a judge 20 has violated the canons of ethics in ongoing litigation 21 in a trial court and outside of the Judicial -- Texas Center for the Judiciary. I mean, I'm not saying I'm 23 against a rule that says if you take a contribution in 24 excess of the limits in Section 253.155(b) you must 25 recuse. That's clean. It's simple. We're not think that before we get mired down into that further that the committee needs to look at that definition. CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Steve. MR. YELENOSKY: Well, I actually think we're getting sidetracked by the "knowing" issue because "knowingly" is obviously an important consideration before you impose some kind of punitive measure, which 11 either the civil penalty would be or the ethics finding 12 would be, but it's absolutely irrelevant from the 13 perspective of the litigant because whether or not the 14 judge knew it when they got it, the only question that's 15 in the perspective of due process and influence is did 16 the judge get the money because they know now that they 17 got it if they didn't know before, and unless they're 18 giving it back right now, the concern is that that's going to influence the judge's decision. 19 So I think we're getting sidetracked by the "knowingly" as applied to the point of acceptance. 22 The question from the perspective of the litigant, 23 getting back to the issue of due process, is whether or 24 not there's money there that could influence the judge; 25 and if we're going to try to get at that, I don't see Page 1081 adjudicating anything that's delegated to another body. When you talk about trial judges litigating ethics 3 violations and statutory violations, it's -- that's pretty weird.

MR. ORSINGER: I think you're stuck on the aggregate rule anyway. If you have any kind of "knowing" concept here and it's anything other than a self-evident excessive contribution, you are mired in a 9 discovery dispute that will require investigation or 10 depositions of minor children, about spouses, about law 11 firm re-alignment. I don't think we should be under the 12 illusion that there is a clean way to apply -

HONORABLE SARAH DUNCAN: You either did 14 or you didn't.

MR. ORSINGER: Well, I know, but if a 16 judge doesn't know that two lawyers that were in separate law firms, and neither one of which violated 18 individual contribution limits and neither one of which 19 violated law firm contribution aggregate limits, if the 20 law firm is re-aligned and now all of the sudden the 21 current new law firm is over the aggregate limit, that's 22 not a knowing violation. That's not anyone's public 23 policy being violated, and yet arguably it's a technical violation unless you use the word "knowing."
 If you use the word "knowing" then aren't

Page 1084 1 how we can get at it but through some kind of recusal 2 position that works somewhat matter-of-factly. The money is there and it's either going to stay there or it's been there long enough that it's influenced the 5 judge, and that's a ground for recusal. I do think that puts us in some problems with the Legislature, but it gets back to the due process issue. CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Justice Duncan

HONORABLE SARAH DUNCAN: I completely 10 agree with Steve. The only thing I might disagree with, 11 just a little thing, is to me it doesn't make a lot of 12 difference if the judge gives it back because there 13 could easily be the expectation is "I'll give it back to you now because we've got this pending case but then you can give it to me next contribution report." So but I agree with Steve. From the perception of the litigants they don't care if it was knowingly. They only care if 18 it was. 10

CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Judge Rhea. HONORABLE BILL RHEA: It seems to me that 21 the subcommittee's language deals appropriately with all 22 of those issues. I would move that we accept the 23 language of the subcommittee and offer that as our 24 recommendation.

CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Elaine.

1 you going to be litigating what the judge knew, and how 2 are you going to know what the judge knew without taking 3 the deposition of the judge or going through their 4 campaign files and deposing spouses?

HONORABLE SARAH DUNCAN: Well, that's precisely what I'm suggesting we not do, is litigate that within the context of the pending case.

CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Sarah's got a point.

HONORABLE SARAH DUNCAN: If there's going 10 to be a limit, it seems to me that either a contribution was accepted in excess of the limits or it wasn't, and 12 there would be discovery. I mean, there would be 13 discovery of, you know, what lawyer belongs to what law 14 firm and who's married to whom. I'm not saying that 15 that's what I would want. I'm just saying that if we're 16 going to have a rule I don't think that we should be -that rule should incorporate the subjective component 18 that's in the statute and the ethical component that's

CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Judge Patterson. HONORABLE JAN PATTERSON: I'm not speaking to the issue except to address this concern that we keep coming back to of what is "knowing." That's been interpreted a number of times, and there is an element of due diligence that's required. It's not

PROFESSOR CARLSON: Can I ask Justice 2 Duncan, were you intimating then that "knowingly" would 3 not be any part of your proposal and that that could in 4 fact be a defense if and when a judge might be called on the carpet from a judicial conduct perspective but would not be part of the recusal?

HONORABLE SARAH DUNCAN: It's not my proposal. As I understand it, I mean, I don't mind that there be such a rule that you must recuse if you've 10 accepted a campaign contribution in excess of the limits 11 imposed by Section 253.155(b) and knowingly would not be 12 any part of that.

PROFESSOR CARLSON: Okay. HONORABLE SARAH DUNCAN: But I don't 15 think that's what the subcommittee's -- this April 4th 16 draft does. I think it requires that there have been a violation of the statute, and I think that's when we get 18 into this knowingly. 19

HONORABLE BILL RHEA: How do you read 20 that? I don't see that language in there? Is one of 21 these sections that's beside here the "knowingly"? 22 HONORABLE SARAH DUNCAN: Maybe not.

CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: It's Section 176 that 24 is the penalty provision that requires the "knowingly," 25 isn't it?

 1 MR. YELENOSKY: Right. And it's 155(a) 2 that has the "knowingly" language, and the proposed rule 3 cites the 155(b). It doesn't specifically cite the (a),
                                                                                                     CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Right.
                                                                                                     MR. ORSINGER: And so we're debating 3 today to get away from the statute, to borrow the 4 and that's consistent with what Judge Rhea is saying and numbers, and to make it an absolute bright line test.
 5 what Mike Hatchell was saying they meant, which was to 6 import these limits irrespective of whether or not there You're either over the number and you're out, or you're not over the number and you're not out.
    was a mens rea.
                                                                                                     CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Opt out, opt in, doesn't matter.
               HONORABLE SARAH DUNCAN: I stand 8
                                                                                                     MR. ORSINGER: That's right.
MR. LOW: But if we do that, the statute 9 corrected, if that is to be only.
10 MS. CORTELL: So we could probably just 11 use a different word than "violates" and avoid that 11 has a limitation period, but if you do that then that 12 means 20 years from now, there's no limitation in this 12 cause.
MR. YELENOSKY: Well, you could also take to out the word "excessive" to make it very clear that you've accepted a contribution that's above the numbers 13 law firm. So how long is it going to be? As long as 14 that judge is on the bench? So if you don't take the 15 limitations, you've got a rule that's going to apply 16 that are in (b), and the only reason we don't put the 17 numbers in, I guess, is because it makes it clear that MR. ORSINGER: I'd also wonder about 17 18 we got them from the the Legislature and it could change 18 accepting even under Scott's language because I still 19 later.
                                                                                      19 feel like these judges are not necessarily going to know HONORABLE SARAH DUNCAN: I think it's the that a contribution is in the limit -- over the limit on "excessive" and "violates" that are -- CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Can you have a the day they deposit the check, so when we use the word "acceptance" I feel like we ought to allow them to have 23 at least the reporting period to find out that they're 24 in excess and then do a refund. violation of 153.155(b) if you've opted out or been 24 given a waiver?

                MR. YELENOSKY: You can have a number HONORABLE F. SCOTT MCCOWN: Well, the
    that's above the number stated there.
                                                                                          statute has a technical way to return a contribution.
                CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: But can you have a
                                                                                          It sets out the procedure for making a return, so if you

                                                                                       3 inadvertently receive a contribution you can pursuant to HONORABLE SARAH DUNCAN: Actually, you 4 the statute return it.

    can violate (b). You can violate (b).
                                                                                                      MR. ORSINGER: But the rule doesn't
                MR. ORSINGER: I can opt out of spending 6 invoke that. What we're borrowing from the rule under the proposal that we're debating right now is the dollar all of it, so the responding judge cannot violate this 8 limits and that's all.

 10 CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Right. So I have --
                                                                                                      MR. YELENOSKY: It doesn't cite the
                MR. ORSINGER: We're all of the sudden 253.155, what is it - 11

                                                                                      12
                                                                                                     MR. YELENOSKY: (d) or (e)? perfectly legal.
                                                                                      13 MR. YELENOSKY: Right, Right. And 14
                                                                                                      CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: (e).
15 that's what Justice Duncan -
                                                                                                      MR. YELENOSKY: Which is the time limits, 15
                MR. ORSINGER: That's the whole point 16 but even if it did, the practical problem raised I think 17 was the judge -- there is a motion for recusal. The 18 judge says -- I guess would the time have necessarily 17 here. The whole point here is that we're borrowing the 18 Legislature's limits, but we're not taking any of the 19 offsetting, balancing, safeguards, procedures, 20 knowingness, nothing. It's just a bright line test. If 21 you took more than the dollar figure, no matter whether 19 run in a campaign to have returned it? Not necessarily, 20 so the judge would still be within the time frame to 21 return it, and so would that be a practical problem with you knew it, didn't know it, whether they remarried, 22 the recusal motion?
    whether they got divorced, whether they joined law 23 HONORABLE F. SCOTT McCOWN: Well, I 24 firms, you're out.
                                                                                      24 think -- what does the statute say about returns?
                HONORABLE F. SCOTT McCOWN: Could I
                                                                                                     MR. YELENOSKY: It says the last day of
 1 suggest that if we changed it to "The judge has accepted 2 a campaign contribution" and then drop down and instead 3 of saying "which violates," we say "which exceeds the 4 limits in section" — and that way it makes it clear 1 the reporting period in which the contribution was 2 received or the fifth day after the date the 3 contribution is received, the later of.
                                                                                                      HONORABLE F. SCOTT MCCOWN: I mean, I that we're taking the limits from those sections. We drop out the term "violate," which makes it sound like definitely think we should incorporate the return 6 because we're just trying to strike a balance here, and 7 if a judge's campaign, if a check rolls in and it's 8 opened and deposited, but within five days or within the 9 reporting period the judge learns of that and makes the 10 return, then I don't think that should be an automatic
  7 the judge did something - CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Bad.
                HONORABLE F. SCOTT McCOWN: -- bad and, 10 you know, I don't know where we are on our theory of 11 comments, but we could have a comment that says that the 12 rule is designed as a technical rule of recusal if the CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: You could say "The 12 13 judge has accepted and not returned pursuant to 14 sections," what, "253.155(e), 157(b) and 160(b)." 15 MR. YELENOSKY: But at the point of the 13 judge took money that exceeded those limits, and we're 14 not passing on or suggesting that the rule is in any way 15 an ethical rule or that we're trying to implement the 16 motion to recuse you wouldn't want the judge to say, 17 "Oh, I've still got a month" or whatever the reporting 18 is to return it. You would want the judge to say, 19 "Well, I'm returning it now," right? How else do you 16 statute or whatever such language
                 CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Well, Richard, I 18 missed that if that's what we were doing, but we should 19 have it someplace decide that -- I mean is the motion to recuse denied MR. ORSINGER: Well, this is largely the 21 task force proposal, but the way I see this it doesn't 21 because there's still time left to return it even if he 22 doesn't?
 22 address the confusion that we're struggling with today.
 23 It was an attempt to borrow the statute's limits, but it MR. WATSON: And who would want at the 24 motion to recuse stage to be the one who prompts the 25 judge to say, "Okay, I'm writing a check refunding 24 also carried with it, I think, by the word "violate" the 25 statute's exceptions.

   $5,000. Thank you, sir, very much. I'm continuing."

CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Well, the problem, 1 threatened to run for judgeship, and people don't give 2 money other than lawyers in those small counties.
 3 Skip, is the timing of the motion to recuse. If the 3 give you 20 or $25, so you give a small amount. He's motion to recuse comes after the reporting period then

                                                                                  5 in (9) and (10) is no doubt imperfect, the concept, as I MS. McNAMARA: Chip, if you're going to vote on the three options, could you distinguish between understand what Richard and Mike Hatchell and others have been saying, is what they're trying to do is borrow

               CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: Yeah. Let's -- as 10 Justice Hardberger points out, why don't we just vote on 11 what I'll call the Hardberger let's-not-do-anything rule 11 thing if those limits are exceeded. Is that fair, 12 first and then we'll try to define the other two 12 Buddy?

18 present law is with regard to recusal under appearance 19 of impropriety insofar as political contributions are 20 that prevents one campaign reporting period from having 21 an effect aeons in the future. We dealt with this

                                                                                  12 I think that is a deficiency in this particular 12 we do with a comment to the bad appearance part of the language. The concept is, however, that we're trying to borrow some things from the statute and reject others.
13 rules something that nobody wants to do with a specific 14 rule?
15 HONORABLE SCOTT BRISTER: A rule that That's the concept of this rule without worrying about 16 says, "Come on. Do it sometimes at least."
                                                                                  16 the details.
17 CHAIRMAN BABCOCK: The task force cites 18 an El Paso case from 1993, writ denied, Aguilar vs.

                                                                                                MR. LOW: All right.
                                                                                  17

                                                                                  19 voting on, and then the alternative to that is put in 20 repeatedly rejected the notion that a judge's acceptance 20 our recusal rule and tie it specifically and explicitly 21 of campaign contributions from lawyers creates bias 21 to the statute, thus a violation of the statute gets you 22 recused, but anything short of a violation of the 22 necessitating recusal or even an appearance of 23 impropriety
                                                                                 23 statute does not get you recused. Okay So those are the two things we're voting on. So you're voting for number -- for everybody who HON. ANN CRAWFORD MCCLURE: And there is 25 a scathing dissent in that case by our now current Chief
